The North Woods Art Tour was the brainchild of charter member Carl Gromoll, who is no longer on the tour. Carl's original concept was to create a way for the public to find artists who worked only at home studios, and didn't necessarily sell their work in galleries. The tour would be a good way for people to find these "hidden artists," see what they do, and how they do it.

That first tour, in 2000, featured 20 artists at 19 locations. Four of these original artists are on the tour this year: Odonata in Mercer, Manitowish River Studio in Manitowish, Moondeer Design (now in Boulder Junction as Moondeer & Friends Gallery), and Bear Paw Pottery (now in St. Germain).

The tour has grown over the years, adding a Fall Tour in 2007. The concept has remained the same: to bring artists and the public together in a meaningful way that facilitates understanding through demonstrations and interaction, and builds connections between the artists and the public.

The tour has flourished because visitors have grown to love the rare opportunity to get behind the scenes at the artists' private studios. Often, art is created in quiet and solitude. The artists of the North Woods Art Tour are excited to meet you and share their efforts and stories. We look forward each year to answering questions, sharing our processes, greeting old friends, and making new ones.

What are visitors are saying about the tour:

"Quite simply put, the Art Tour is a unique form of enjoyment. The sheer breadth of artwork set within the beauty of the Northwoods adds an element not present anywhere else."

"Beautifully appealing art and lovely atmosphere. A joy to the eyes and heart on this tour."
